Property ownership rights are a great bulwark against destruction of American society. They are, as more than one eminent jurist has noted, the most fundamental of all civil rights. We need only to look about us to note what pride in ownership accomplishes. We know that government of itself creates no wealth. . . Every other human right rests on the foundation stone of the right to own property and be undisturbed in its possession. . . Without it, no man is a free man. — Natchez (Miss.) Democrat

Filthy Habits
From an angry smoker came a letter to the Times of London advocating that nonsmokers be kept out of railroad smoking compartments — mainly because of their "filthy habits," like gum-chewing, sweet-sucking and chocolate-crunching. Proving, no doubt, that one man's sweet is another man's poison. — Dallas (Tex.) Times Herald

The Reason
One of the best sources for ascertaining what is wrong with the world is your church. This is no startling revelation, but we mention it by way of passing on to our readers a bit of intelligence we picked up from our minister a Sunday or so ago.

The reason mankind is so beset with ills, said he, is that the good people get tired of being good before the bad people get tired of being bad. — Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle

Happiness Is . . .
A firm specializing in men's evening wear is preparing an advertising campaign based on the premise that happiness can be achieved by going out more often. . . "If there's one thing we know about," says the company, "it's being happy. We absolutely positively know that a man who puts on a tuxedo and takes his wife to a fancy place is going to be happy."

Rescued After Being Trapped 58 Hours

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For 58 hours Frank Carbonara lay trapped in darkness, unable to move.

"I thought I was dead," he said later.

He could hear the heavy equipment pulling away the rubble of a Veterans Administration Hospital which collapsed in Tuesday's earthquake.

As more and more bodies were removed from the wreckage, hope faded that any survivors would be found.

But when workers lifted a large concrete slab from the debris Thursday, there lay Carbonara, a 68-year-old hospital dietician.

He was gaunt, his lips were parched, his left hand was a purple bruise, but he was alive. "Hi," he said to his rescuers.

Talking in a whisper to newsmen from a bed at Harbor General Hospital, where he was taken by helicopter, Carbonara said he thought he was saved because of his prayers.

His wife of 38 years agreed. Rescuers said Carbonara was protected by a large metal tub which shielded his head from the weight of the rubble.

His brother-in-law, Joe Di-Nicola, was at the rescue site and said a bulldozer nearly ran over Carbonara before he was sighted. "We found a live one!" a rescue worker shouted.

"I'm happy to be alive and anxious to see my family," Carbonara said. He said he thought he had gone sleepless throughout the ordeal and "I wasn't able to move."

Dr. Justin Ban said Carbonara had chest and hand injuries but was in good condition for a man of his age.

"The reason he survived," the doctor said, "is luck."

LETTING OFF STEAM, engineers test California steam wells for temperature and pressure. The Geysers Power Plant, in remote northeastern Sonoma County, is the only geothermal power plant in North America. There are only six countries in the world using underground steam to spin turbine-generators making electric power.

Bloodmobile Coming Here Monday

Hempstead County has fallen behind in their blood quota for two consecutive visits in this fiscal year. With only two more visits to go Haskell Jones, Red Cross Blood Mobile Chairman, urges the citizens of Hope to respond on Monday, February 15, when the Bloodmobile comes to Hope.

Persons who are hospitalized in Hempstead County can secure blood because others gave for them, but if you are hospitalized outside the county, you cannot use Red Cross Blood unless you or a member of your family has given within the past twelve months.

Red Cross Blood has two big advantages: (1) it is available and (2) it costs less than commercial blood. Do you know when you will need blood? The answer is no, but you do know when you can put some in the bank for future use, Monday, February 15, 12 noon to 6:00 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church.

Sex Authors Launch New Joint Effort

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Dr. William H. Masters and Virginia Johnson, co-authors of two sex research books, have launched a new joint effort—marriage.

Dr. Masters confirmed Thursday night that he and his partner in the Reproductive Biology Research Foundation were married Jan. 7 in Fayetteville, Ark.

Their controversial research into sex acts has produced the material for the books "Human Sexual Response," published in 1966, and a 1970 followup, "Human Sexual Inadequacy."

The Fayetteville ceremony was performed by Dr. LeMon Clark, a physician and Unitarian minister who is a personal friend of the couple.

Dr. Masters said no attempt was made to conceal the marriage.

"It was just a private ceremony," he said.

Masters, 55, and his 45-year-old wife each has two children by previous marriages. Masters was divorced Aug. 27, 1970, she on Nov. 30, 1965. Masters is an obstetrician and gynecologist and his wife a psychologist.

Masters said he and his wife will continue to be known professionally as Dr. Masters and Mrs. Johnson.

Mayors Lash Nixon Over Revenue

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A committee of nine U.S. mayors headed by John V. Lindsay of New York has accused the Nixon administration of "reverse revenue-sharing" by proposing cuts in some federal aid to cities.

The mayors also asked in a news conference Thursday for release of $1.3 billion they said was authorized by Congress for urban programs this year but held up by the administration.

Lindsay said the money, for urban renewal, sewer and water construction, public housing and model cities, is needed by virtually every major city.

The members of the Legislative Action Committee of the U.S. Conference of Mayors toured urban renewal sites with San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, who said, "There are 3,000 units of desperately needed housing that can be started right away if we have a commitment of federal funds."

Lindsay said administration budget proposals for next year "shortchange the cities by providing funding for urban programs far below the level authorized by Congress."

"There is a consistent pattern of cutbacks and reductions of urban programs, and a lower priority of funds for cities in the budget," he said.

For example, Lindsay said, the summer Youth Corps program would be cut by $32 million while cities would increase their share of support from 10 per cent to 20 per cent of the program, and the Community Action Program would be cut by $22.4 million with the local share going up from 20 per cent to 25 per cent.

"Over-all, we view this budget as a severe setback for the cities," Lindsay said.

Mayors on the San Francisco tour also included Sam Massell of Atlanta, John Driggs of Phoenix, Thomas D'Alesandro of Baltimore, Kenneth Gibson of Newark, N.J., Peter Flaherty of Pittsburgh, Harry Haskell of Wilmington, Del., and Kevin White of Boston.

Selb Official Is Acquitted by U.S. Jury

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — James Townley of Hurst, Tex., was acquitted Thursday night on a charge of conspiring to conceal defective parts made for the F111 airplane. The presiding judge said he was "inclined to disagree" with the verdict.

The U.S. District Court jury also found Townley innocent on 14 counts of making false representation on various reports. Judge J. Smith Henley did not criticize the jury's findings on those counts.

The jury returned the verdict after deliberating more than three hours and taking a one-hour supper break.

The government alleged that Townley, a former quality assurance supervisor for General Dynamics Corp. of Fort Worth, Tex., told inspectors for Selb Manufacturing Co. of Walnut Ridge to alter discrepancies in wing pivot support plates in inspection reports.

General Dynamics is the prime contractor for the F111 and Selb manufactured parts for the fighter-bomber.

After the verdict was announced, Henley said he believed Townley played a "leading role" in what he termed the "Selb conspiracy."

Emmett Colvin of Dallas, one Townley's attorneys, contended in his closing argument Thursday that Townley had been set up as a "sacrificial goat."

Colvin described what he said were two "gangs" — the "Selb gang" at Walnut Ridge and the "top of the rock gang" at General Dynamics. He said that when the two groups realized they were in trouble they formed a "game plan."

He said the first step in the plan was the formation of a verification team which found some defective parts on some of the planes. He said the second step was to make Townley "their sacrificial goat."

"Now they are prepared for the publicity," Colvin said. "Now they are prepared for it coming to light. . . Now they are prepared to offer up a lamb to take their place. He (Townley) was caught up and squashed by the top of the rock gang."

U.S. Atty. W. H. Dillahunty charged that Townley was a "crack, a flaw" in the government's assumption that honest people were fulfilling government contracts.

N. Ireland is Headed for Crisis

By COLIN FROST
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Northern Ireland is an armed camp that seems to be heading for crisis, both economic and military.

Senior officials believe it is only a matter of time before the Irish Republican Army renews guerrilla tactics which in the past week have caused 11 deaths. They are afraid that unless the IRA can be stopped quickly Northern Ireland's Protestants will react angrily.

"The gun is back in Irish politics," an official said. "All Irish history shows that when that happens the result is a bloodletting."

Underlining this, five explosions resounded in central Belfast early today, but large numbers of troops and police called out to seek damage and casualties reported neither.

The current violence comes from IRA's Provisional wing, composed of Roman Catholic nationalists trying to expel the British army and unite the mainly Protestant province with the Catholic-dominated Republic of Ireland to the south.

The Provisionals have many rifles and automatic weapons and apparently possess a large supply of gellignite, a type of dynamite. This explosive was used Tuesday in a booby trap that killed five civilians.

On the other side, the similarly outlawed Ulster Volunteer Force also is well armed and trained. It is dedicated to maintaining Protestant rule in the six counties North and rejecting any link with the Republic.

At the moment the UVF is largely passive but military officials do not expect this situation to continue if IRA activity is stepped up.

In between the outlawed forces is the embattled British force which came in August 1969 to head off a bloodbath between Protestants and Catholics in Belfast's back streets.

The military situation and the economic ills behind it make a somber setting for the 50th anniversary of the Northern Ireland government formed by the partition of Ireland.

Recent reinforcements have brought the British army's strength in Ulster to 7,400 men, and it is clear that they are having trouble keeping the peace even before Northern Ireland's "marching season" begins.

Each spring and summer Catholic and Protestant organizations stage parades and counter-parades, and at the height of last year's marching season 12,000 British soldiers were in the province. Units were called in from Germany, Cyprus and Malta.

Customs Men Say Thank You

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. customs inspectors said, "Thank you," when an American returned from Mexico recently with 93 pounds of marijuana he had purchased. He declared the pot and the agents took it.

They quoted the man as saying he was father of 14 children and had bought the marijuana, valued at $14,000 to $16,000 if sold on the street, to keep it off the market and out of the hands of children.

Could Seize Family Car

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Teen-agers caught driving the family car with marijuana or illicit drugs in their possession could face confiscation of the car under a policy begun in Marion County Circuit Court this week.

Dist. Atty. Gary Gortmaker said the court has discretion in confiscating cars in which narcotics are found "to discourage the use of automobiles to transport these illicit drugs." He said he hoped the threat of confiscation would be "a warning to parents."

Some Names of British Delicacies Can Put a Chap Off His Feed

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — Shakespeare's rose by any other name might smell as sweet, but some of the names that British waitresses have for the day's delicacies can put a visiting chap off his feed for weeks.

The menu of any semipositive place may glitter with Continental elegance—words like "entremets" and "farinaceous" and "legumes varies"—but such pretensions vanish once the little lady with the pad and pencil puts in an appearance.

"Are you taking the set, Luv?" she briskly inquires, pencil poised truculently over the bill of fare.

The set is the day's set menu, the table d'hôte from which there is no textual deviation without paying the price.

"Luv" is a unisex form of address, more informal than sir or madame and a trifle less intimate than "ducks."

Adventures in living language really begin when the customer strikes out for himself into the columns of a la carte, or what the waitress dismisses as "not on the set."

Steaks, for instance, are usually available in two cuts: "rump" or "fillet," the latter is invariably pronounced to rhyme with "swill it." They come under the generic heading of grills, as in the accusatory question, "are you having a grill?"

Even so, they sound more appetizing than "bangers and mash," which are sausages and mashed potatoes, or "botted gammon," which is neither fish nor fowl but ordinary, everyday ham; or steak and kidney pie.

Those not having a grill might be inclined toward "a fry," sometimes called "a fry up": fried bacon, ham or sausage—bangers—served with eggs any style, and, in the Midlands, with "drippings," fat left in the refrigerator from yesterday's roast and spread on bread.

"Now what about a veg, Luv?"

Procrastinate too long between the braised celery and the sauteed cabbage, and she's apt to suggest "some luv'ly swedes and sprouts," which are turnips and brussels sprouts, a culinary curiosity that is flogged off in the swankiest London clubs as "good, honest British food."

At the end of every meal comes the question that haunts the calorie counters.

"Are you having a pud?" The word rhymes with "hood," rather than "mud," and designates any dessert from a "stodge," a pudding made with suet, to "stamed sultana," a sort of sponge cake, and "trifle," a combination of cake, pudding, custard and fruit drowned in cream.

They organized the Youth Citizenship Fund, Inc., six months ago and, armed with $40,000 in foundation funds, set out to register the country's 11 million 18-to-20 year olds. The Fund also is working to encourage 21-to-24 year olds to vote.

"Historically, 21-to-24 year olds have the poorest voting record of any age group in the country," said 23-year-old Charles Gonzales of New Iberia, La., a Fund staff member who dropped out of New Mexico's College of Santa Fe to lobby for the 18-year-old vote.

"We're trying to deal with the problems of apathy and disillusionment so many young people face with the electoral process," Gonzales said in an interview.

"We want to impress kids with the idea that they have power if they vote together."

The Fund also has a problem in impressing many state legislatures that teen-agers should vote at all. When the Supreme Court ruled last December that 18-year olds have the right to vote in federal elections, it said the franchise in state and local elections remains within the jurisdiction of the individual states.

So far, only nine states have dropped the voting age below 21.

The group is testing its two-pronged registration and education program in four areas which have already dropped the voting age from 21: Chicago, Louisville, Ky., Boston and Washington, D.C.

"In Kentucky," Gonzales said, "we're going to set up branch registration programs in each high school and college if the county clerks agree."

"And in Boston, the public school system has agreed to begin work on developing new curricula in the social studies program. Before the kids actually start registering, they'll be provided with citizenship education and registration material."

The Fund's advisory council includes John W. Gardner, chairman of Common Cause; Mrs. Bruce B. Benson, national president of the League of Women Voters; Dr. S.I. Hayakawa, president of San Francisco State College, and Dr. Margaret Mead, the anthropologist.

Financial assistance has been provided by John D. Rockefeller 3rd, the Stern Family Fund, the Eugene and Agnes Meyer Foundation, the Episcopal Church Center and Western Union. Each staff member receives a weekly salary of $125.

If the Fund's efforts to register the country's young people succeed, will they vote like their parents, as some experts have predicted?

"I don't think so," said Gonzales. "Our surveys show kids are interested in different issues: stopping pollution, ending the war and equal rights for all people."

"They place more emphasis on human concerns and they're not as oriented towards bureaucracy and production as their parents are."

That Gonzales' colleagues share his assessment of the young voters' interests is emphasized by the Fund's slogan: "Register Your Discontent."

Group Trying to Get Youths to the Polls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years before the 1972 election, 10 young people are spearheading a drive to give the Now Generation some electoral clout.

They organized the Youth Citizenship Fund, Inc., six months ago and, armed with $40,000 in foundation funds, set out to register the country's 11 million 18-to-20 year olds. The Fund also is working to encourage 21-to-24 year olds to vote.

Scientists Intrigued by Moon Rock

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Moon rocks and astronauts come under careful scrutiny again today as evaluation of the Apollo 14 mission continues in the isolation of the Lunar Receiving Laboratory.

During the first day in the two-week quarantine in the lab Friday, astronaut Edgar D. Mitchell acknowledged he had conducted a personal experiment in mental telepathy during the flight and scientists became intrigued by a mysterious white rock.

It had been reported earlier that Mitchell tried to send symbols by mental telepathy to a Chicago man who claims to be a psychic.

A space agency spokesman in the lab said Mitchell confirmed he did conduct an experiment in mental telepathy but the astronauts declined to discuss it further.

The experiment was described as a personal project and in no way interfered with Mitchell's duties on the moon flight, which ended Tuesday with splashdown in the South Pacific.

Mitchell and his crewmates, Alan B. Shepard Jr. and Stuart A. Roosa, are confined to the lab until Feb. 26 on the remote chance they brought germs back to earth. Few scientists believe there are germs on the moon.

The astronauts are spending the first few days in quarantine discussing technical and engineering details of the nine-day mission with experts. Discussion is conducted through a glass panel equipped with a communications system.

In another section of the laboratory, scientists opened the first box of moon rocks collected by Shepard and Mitchell in the Fra Mauro highlands a week ago.

The container opened Friday had about nine pounds of the 95 pounds of material brought to earth by the astronauts. But in it was a three-inch-long chip off a large white rock which the moonwalkers described while on the surface.

Geologists have speculated it might be part of the primitive lunar crust that they theorize underlies the area.

"Nobody knows what the rock is and obviously there is going to have to be a lot of work," said Dr. Robin Brett, chief of the geochemistry branch at the Manned Spacecraft Center.

Space Program Still Without Administrator

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Five months after Dr. Thomas O. Paine resigned as head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, President Nixon has still to name a permanent chief for the money-short agency.

"We are at the peril point," Paine declared when he resigned the $37,000-a-year assignment in September to become a vice president of General Electric Co. He referred to deep congressional cuts in the NASA budget and the layoff of tens of thousands of technicians, engineers and managers.

At its peak, NASA had 35,000 civil servants and a total of 420,000 persons were directly involved in the space program as contractor employees. Now these figures are down to 31,000 and 150,000.

Congressional support hit an all-time low last April after the near-disaster of the Apollo 13 mission, aborted near the moon because of an oxygen tank explosion.

The successful landing on the moon last week by the Apollo 14 astronauts could dampen some of the congressional opposition, but more down-to-earth projects are vying strongly for the budget dollar.

AID FOR PAKISTAN

Supplies are brought into the stricken areas by helicopter and truck—but the final stage of distribution is often by ox-cart.

The cyclone which struck East Pakistan on the night of Nov. 12-13, 1970, caused one of the greatest disasters in recorded history. Fifty countries responded with emergency help, the U.N. Secretary-General has called for further help and the World Bank has planned extensive reconstruction.

U.S. assistance has played a major role in relief work. The Agency for International Development (A.I.D.) had already been at work in the area, and A.I.D.-financed coastal embankments and cyclone shelters, for example, saved thousands of lives. After the disaster, A.I.D. provided emergency relief, including the use of ten helicopters which in 25 days flew more than 1,250 sorties and delivered more than a million pounds of supplies to the helpless survivors.

The emergency relief phase is now over. Looking ahead, to help Pakistani farmers to recover from the loss of rice crops, the U.S. has allocated 200,000 tons of wheat and rice. A.I.D. airlifted 21,000 pounds of fast-growing vegetable seeds to the area in time for January planting, and A.I.D. financing is expected to help with some of the major works of the Pakistan government's rehabilitation plans. Altogether, A.I.D. has allocated $28 million in U.S. dollars and food to help the people of East Pakistan in their recovery from the cyclone.

Television and Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Viewers who enjoy watching Chief Ironside and company solving crimes probably will sit still for another half hour watching more cops round up miscreants. That apparently was the way NBC figured things when it moved "Adam 12" out of Saturday nights into Thursday just before Dean Martin's variety hour.

It seems they were right. "Adam 12" in what the industry calls "a hammock position" between two popular programs is building higher ratings than any time during the previous two seasons.

The 30 minutes usually involve three or four cases supposedly encountered by a patrol car team of Los Angeles police played by Martin Milner and Kent McCord—during a tour of duty.

This week, however, things were a little different. First there was a guest star—Shelley Berman—playing a cameo role as a fast-talking car artist. And a couple of the cases were related: the stabbing of a skid row derelict and a gun-happy young man running around a railroad station. It didn't make much sense, but there was a lot of action.

"The Dean Martin Show" is beginning to show signs of age and to lean a little heavily on the star's personality. And the star apparently thinks that if he sings a couple of songs and reads painfully from his cue cards he has done enough.

That isn't quite true. The program seems to move slower and slower as Martin plays cuter and cuter. This week, Debbie Reynolds was around in something that looked as if it had been rehearsed for a Las Vegas nightclub.

For the past few weeks, the educational stations have been evolving nostalgia for the depression-torn 1930s with a series of dramas fixing the mood of the times.

It continued Wednesday by presenting without explanation, without excuse, a 1938 hit movie, "Once in a Lifetime." It was adapted from George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart's play which made fun of the panic in Hollywood after sound hit the silver screen.

Comedy often ages poorly. The movie was not funny, just quaint.

A re-enactment of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, taped in Ford's Theatre, Washington, will be the subject of NBC's Lincoln day special tonight from 7:30 to 8:30 EST.

Moon Explorers Return to Houston

By MIKE COCHRAN

Associated Press Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo 14's moon explorers returned home today, held a reunion with their families through a glass panel, then began two more weeks of isolation in the Lunar Receiving Laboratory.

An Air Force C141 jet transport flew them to nearby Ellington Air Force Base, landing at 4:34 a.m. EST after a flight of more than 14 hours from American Samoa.

Alan B. Shepard Jr., Edgar D. Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa were confined in a quarantine trailer, which was taken to the Manned Spacecraft Center, where the spacemen transferred to the lab.

The wives and children of the spacemen and several officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration stood in cool weather and blustery wind to greet the returning heroes.

The astronauts waved at them through a trailer window and Shepard, who commanded Apollo 14, said, "We feel it's been a good mission and we're ready to start debriefing and talking about it."

"It is especially good to be back here," he added. "There were many little things that happened during the mission that could have been serious if it hadn't been for all the devoted efforts of all the people at the control center here in Houston who worked so long and hard to make things turn out right."

Roosa apologized for the plane's being three hours later, saying, "We had a hard time getting away from those Samoan dancing girls."

Waiting in the Lunar Receiving Laboratory were 12 persons who will remain with the astronauts until the release Feb. 26, performing medical, housekeeping and other chores.

The spacemen began their isolation in a quarantine trailer aboard the helicopter carrier New Orleans after their recovery from a Pacific Ocean splashdown Tuesday.

When the ship had steamed to within helicopter range of Samoa Thursday, they departed by helicopter for Pago Pago, shielded in isolation garments and face masks. At Pago Pago, they boarded a quarantine trailer in an Air Force C141 jet transport for the trip to Houston.

Quarantine for the trio was designed to prevent the spread of any germs they may have brought back from the moon. No germs were found on the astronauts or moon rocks of the Apollos 11 and 12 missions, and if the same is true of this crew, future moon astronauts probably will not be quarantined.

Scientists planned today to open the first of the boxes of rocks and lunar material collected by Shepard and Mitchell in the moon's Fra Mauro highlands.

This box, containing about 10 pounds of samples, was flown here Thursday afternoon. It was placed in a cabinet of dry nitrogen gas and the outside was sterilized throughout the night with peracetic acid.

Additional rocks arrived with the astronauts, but the bulk of the 95 pounds will come next week with the quarantine trailer that was aboard the New Orleans.

A Different Kind of Island

By JOYCE GABRIEL

BERMUDA — (NEA) — When Mark Twain sailed on the first luxury cruise ship to Bermuda, he thought he would hate it.

What could there be out in the middle of the Atlantic except fish and water? And Twain had seen plenty of both growing up on the banks of the Mississippi.

He was surprised. The island delighted him. That was back in 1887 and although since Twain's first visit the island has changed and the tourist trade has blossomed, Bermuda still surprises people.

There is a tendency to group Bermuda with the Bahamas or "those islands in the Caribbean," but it is miles away from them, literally and figuratively. The island is 600 miles off the coast of South Carolina, not south of Florida, as the other islands are. The climate is cooler. A tourist in Bermuda in December has need of a coat, not a bathing suit. And the atmosphere there is more New England proper than tropical paradise. That is because Bermuda is Britain's oldest colony and although she has political autonomy, culturally she is very much tied to the mother country.

The sand on the beaches really is pink and the Atlantic sparkles turquoise blue in the semi-tropical sun, but one is more likely to see an Anglo-Saxon in business suit on motorbike than "giant natives" in island garb.

And the people who go to Bermuda are looking for relaxation, not neon lights. Gambling casinos, which flourish in other vacation spots, are outlawed here. On the island, golf and water sports are the main attractions.

I believe we will see many more demonstrations by Indian groups next year.

—Dr. Jack Forbes, a University of California professor who is also a Powhatan Indian.

I think it is up to the proponents of the SST to prove it will not pollute, rather than the other way around.

—Sen. Elect James L. Buckley of New York.

It is a wise bridge player who knows his partner and both his opponents.

West opened the four of hearts against the rather normal three no-trump contract and South proceeded to rise with dummy's jack.

East played the five spot and South proceeded to overtake dummy's jack with the king. Then he started on the diamond suit.

West had to take the second diamond and then West went into communion with nature to decide on his next play.

The ordinary player would simply play a second heart and hope for the best, but West wasn't an ordinary player. He was Bill Grieve of New York who played for the United States in the 1960 World's Championships. East was George Raapee one of the game's best. Bill and George played together on the team that tied for the champion-

South was that well-known expert Mr. Nameless. It is not the policy of this department to give the names of victims.

Bill remembered that George had played the five of hearts at trick one and that the five was the lowest heart missing. Would he have played it if he held four hearts? Very unlikely, thought Bill.

Then why did good old nameless waste his king of hearts? Because he was afraid of some other suit. Bill knew what the suit had to be. He led the spade king, just so that George would know what was going on. Then the deuce of spades to the ace and the defense had four spade tricks.

What would February be without a salute to the Father of Our Country, George Washington, and a new cherry pie recipe? One with a different twist features sharp Cheddar cheese and honey wheat germ. It is decorative with a lattice topping and may be made with fresh or canned cherries.

CHERRY 'N' CHEESE WHEAT GERM PIE

- 1 pkg. (10 oz.) pie crust mix
- 1/2 cup sugared honey wheat germ
- 1/2 cup grated sharp Cheddar cheese
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 5 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 4 cups fresh pitted sour red cherries
- 1 1/2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Combine pie crust mix, wheat germ and grated cheese. Add water as directed on package. Wrap in foil; chill. Combine sugar, flour and cinnamon; mix

A GOOD WORD FOR POLICEMEN

Dear Helen: Maybe it isn't popular among some groups to stand up for "the fuzz" but my father is a policeman, and I know the side of the story that sometimes doesn't get printed.

There's a four-year-old who wouldn't be alive except for my Dad. He pulled the boy out of a burning car, and could have died doing it.

There's a family that got "adopted" by the guys at the precinct, after the husband beat up his wife for the last time and left.

There's a "juvenile delinquent" who comes by twice a week just to talk, and he's now straight.

There's the framed plaque with all the signatures which starts, "To Our Favorite Cop" from the kids at high school (when my father had that beat).

There are the classes Dad started, so junior college students would get more interested in police work.

And how about the artificial respiration that saved a heart attack victim's life? Or all those other things he does in the line of duty. And other policemen do, too.

Those people who call them Pigs—next time they need help I hope they call a doper. — POLICEMAN'S KID

Dear Helen: The letter from the girl who wrote about the "sexy" teacher: It doesn't happen often, but if kids would only tell an adult, might it would happen a lot less.

(Except a 12- or 13-year old isn't really sure what's happening and somehow she's ashamed to say anything.) Here's my story:

Back in eighth grade I had a male teacher everybody liked. He told me he dreamed about me, and once he whispered what the dream was about. Then he'd tease me about joining a nudist camp or spending the week-end with him. I was such an innocent I didn't even know what he meant, but when he tried to put his arm around me once, I ran, so he never tried it again.

I make him sound like a real wolf, and he wasn't, but he told me we had a crush on each other. Maybe he was laughing behind my back because I was so dumb. As far as I know, He was happily married.

But this left its mark—mainly because I couldn't tell anyone and was all mixed-up, being half afraid of and half fascinated by someone I had to call "Mr."

Now, at 17, I have a hard time relating to guys. I keep wondering, are they playing me for a fool, leading me on, or trying to get something.

This is the first time I've ever told anyone, and I feel better already. That's why I say, if a young girl has an experience like this—even if she doesn't think it is real serious—she should talk to someone about it, or she may have a few problems later on. — WONDERING WHY NOW

Dear Helen:

What do you think about a person who says he will give you your Christmas gift in January "when it goes on sale"? He did, too. Was real proud that he saved $10.00.—CHEAP OR SMART? Dear C or S:

We-I-I-I, if he's saving for an engagement ring—maybe it's smart.—H.

Carpet tiles make a dramatic design difference for a young girl's room. Designer Crosby Wright Smith did red and gold room (left), using self-adhesive foam-backed Caprolan nylon tiles for a wall-to-wall effect. Center design carries the gold with pine accent wall, swivel chair and bunk bed in warm natural tones. Wall behind bed and white chest is same red as carpet tile. Smith shifts to a bright red and blue chevron stripe (right) with wall picking up softer blue tone. Plastic toy boxes resemble milk carton carriers which, if available, can be used for the storage purpose. Peel-and-stick tiles are removable in case of spilled ink or other damage. To make the accent wall use 1x4-inch tongue-and-grooved beveled pine cut at a 45-degree angle. Start by laying out a perfect cross in center of the wall and work outward, measuring and cutting each piece of wood accordingly.

In Hamilton, stores like Trimmingham's and Cooper's line Front Street, offering bargains in china, linen, perfume and sweaters. Liquor stores attract tourists with their wholesale prices. And across the street from the shopping district is the harbor where cruise ships dock and fishing boats and pleasure craft lay at anchor.

In St. George, Bermuda's original capital, streets that are no more than alleys wind their way from a cobbled square where reconstructed stocks and pillories are monuments to 17th century British rule.

In a recession economy, Bermuda still maintains its tourist trade. One reason is high. The two families pay, respectively, taxes of $1,586 and $3,005.

When the percentages are translated into dollar amounts, there is of course more cash passing through the hands of the high-living Joneses. And since almost half of the budget, in either family, goes for housing and food, this is where the Joneses are most conspicuously spending more.

They spend $326 a month to keep a roof over their heads, while their more frugal neighbors spend $215 a month. The Joneses spend $13 a week more on food.

And there is the shocker—what the BLS says a family of four has to spend on food these days (or worse, last spring). It's $47.90 a week in the intermediate budget, $60.81 a week in the high.

On the whole, in terms of consumer goods, the Joneses aren't really living all that much higher than the family with $5,000 less to spend. Disregard taxes, Social Security, insurance and such payments, and the Joneses are getting only $1,857 worth of goods and services more than the intermediate family.

So quit trying to keep up. It doesn't pay.

Bobcats Beaten by Magnolia

By BILL MOORE
Star Sports Writer

Last night at Magnolia, the Hope Bobcats hit second half foul trouble and fell victim to the Panthers, 51-40, before a large crowd.

Hope's district record now drops to 4-2 while Magnolia is also at 4-2. Overall, the Cats are 14-8.

Taking the tipoff, Hope scored within eight seconds on a 15 foot jumpshot by Parker Powell, but for the first three minutes neither team could get a good lead on the other.

However, after Hope took a timeout, the Cats came back on the court and Lynn Norton and John Dudley combined for six straight points and a 12-7 lead with 2:20 left. After Steve Harris hit a 10 foot jumper at the buzzer, Hope held a 16-11 margin.

Two early free throws in the second period and three baskets in the middle were all the Cats could hit as they ran through a cold streak the last part of the quarter. With Magnolia staying right behind, Hope held a slim, 24-21, margin at halftime.

As Charles Frazier and James Caldwell exchanged field goals at the opening of the third quarter, Willie Dale later put Magnolia in a slight lead with two buckets, but Powell hit with 3:02 left for a 28-27 lead.

The quarter later ended in a 31-31 tie after David Briggs sank a free throw with four seconds left.

Although getting the last quarter tipoff, Hope could do nothing and repeated fouls along with bad passing hurt the Bobcats as they could only muster up seven points in the quarter. Dudley led Hope with 16, while Powell had 10, and Briggs hit four.

Earlier in the first two games, the B-Bruins also lost a 40-29 decision, and the Bobkittens were repelled, 56-33.

Falling behind early, 4-1, the

B-Bruins used points by Buddy

Ingram and Roger Newton to knot the score at the end of the first period at six all.

Using two baskets by Bill

Rowland Hope took a slight lead, but outscored, 8-4, in the last half of the period, the Bruins trailed at halftime, 17-14.

In the second half the B-Bruins stayed right with the Panthers as they trailed by three points moving into the last period, after seconds left.

Danny Joyce hit the net with 12

However, only scoring two or three times, Hope hit large cold streaks and thus fell out of the running for victory.

Newton led Hope with nine points felled by Rowland with seven, and Ingram with five.

In the junior high game, the Bobkittens started out slowly and just couldn't catch up, although getting to within one point.

Jimmy Smith's eight points led the Kittens first quarter scoring as the quarter ended with Hope trailing, 16-12, but the Kittens started losing ground in the next period.

With only Smith and David

Huddleston able to hit two points each the Panther Cubs widened their lead over Hope with various shots, as they claimed full command in a 29-16 halftime lead.

Two baskets by Smith early in the third quarter was all Hope could mount until Bud Martin ripped the net with 43 seconds left, but Magnolia led, 43-22, and the last quarter wasn't really any different.

Smith led Hope with 16 points,

while Huddleston and Tim Hogan had four each.

Tuesday the Bobkittens travel back to Magnolia for the district tournament, while the Bobcats host Arkadelphia next Friday and then travel to Fairview the following night.

He Still Feels Effects of Marciano KO

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — There was no heat in the large office building on Broadway and Carmine Vingo, a big man in blue uniform, stood in the tomb-like marble lobby and rubbed his rough-chilled hands together. The midnight cold crept under the glass-door entrance. Carmine Vingo shivered and uttered a quiet oath that ended in a puff of breath.

"Cold," he said. "I ain't got no radio tonight, neither. The guy with the radio busted his back and he's in the hospital. His room is locked with the radio in it."

Carmine Vingo is the security porter here ("People say security guard, but it's really security porter") and on this wintry Sunday night he would have to keep one purblind eye on the door while he mopped the floor, emptied the ashtrays, scrubbed the elevators.

"Who'd ever believe it?" Vingo asked. "I figured the worst that could happen was to get knocked out. Actually, I was figurin' on winnin'."

Vingo was referring to another wintry night, Dec. 30, 1949, the day after his 20th birthday and a few weeks before he had planned to be married. He fought Rocky Marciano. It was the first 10-round event at Madison Square Garden for both. Vingo had a 16-1 record and he and Rocky and Roland LaStarza were considered the best young heavyweights around and one of them, said experts, would surely become champion.

Vingo was knocked out in the sixth round; he did not get up. He did not regain consciousness for three weeks. He was paralyzed for two years, his right leg is still stiff and he is partially blind in both eyes.

"I can't drive a car no more, I can't walk so good no more. I can't even put my pants on without leaning against the wall. Imagine that! And I can't dance no more. Used to love to do the Lindy Hop," said Vingo.

He speaks softly, hoarsely. His salt-and-pepper hair is combed carefully back in stiff lines. His face is clean-shaven but bluish from a heavy beard and a trace of pock marks. His eyes are soft-brown and lingering. His nose is flat. He appears older than 41.

"There were two other 10-round, fights after us that night," said Vingo. "Both guys who lost, Ruben Jones and Dick Wagner, used to live in my neighborhood in the Bronx. They'd come by and visit and they blamed me for their loss. 'Carmine,' they said, 'we were slippin' in the ring because all the water they threw on you.'"

A few months after he left the hospital Carmine Vingo married his sweetheart, Cathy. They moved in with her folks.

"And all the neighbors thought we were rich because of all the rumors that we were collecting thousands from all over the place," said Vingo. "What a laugh. The only money we got was from Cathy working. I couldn't hardly get out of bed for two years."

There were and are no pension plans for prize fighters (though recently there has been a slow movement in this direction in New York). "Pension?" said Vingo.

"They didn't even have a stretcher. I heard that six guys carried me out of the ring."

Another belief was that Rocky Marciano was helping Vingo financially. In fact, after Marciano died in a plane crash on August 31, 1969, the New York Times obituary read: "Despite his reputation for conservative spending, Marciano had a list of beneficiaries to whom he sent money regularly. One of these was Carmine Vingo."

"The only thing we ever got from Rocky were promises," said Cathy Vingo recently. "He'd tell Carmine that he'd have something going for him soon, to put him in some business, that he had some property for him in Florida, that he'd have a benefit for him. Nothing. Each man is for himself in the fight game. That's the game."

"I didn't care," said Carmine, blowing on his hands in the lobby. "But my wife gets mad about it. I didn't push Rocky or Al Weill, his manager. Maybe if I'd pushed. But I'm not the type. Rocky, he was one of the nicest guys you'd ever want to talk to. I'd go up to his training camp in the mountains. And I was at his wedding and met his family, wonderful people, his aunts and cousins and uncles. And I went to his funeral. Paid my own way. My wife came in one morning and said, 'Carmine, I got terrible news. The radio said Rocky Marciano was killed in a plane crash.'"

"I never asked Rocky for nothin'. But he did send me two tickets for his second fight in Chicago with Jersey Joe Walcott. Sent two round-trip plane tickets, too. And you know, I never did get my purse for my fight with Rocky. It was $1,500. It went for doctor bills. I had four private nurses and the whole bill was about $4,000. I still don't know who paid that. It couldn't been Rocky. But he only got $1,500, too. And he couldn't have had much money because he was just startin' out, just like me. He didn't start makin' it big 'till after our fight."

Carmine makes $125 a week now and things are getting tougher. The house of his in-laws, where he has lived for 21 years, is being torn down by the city for a housing project. He must find a new apartment. He needs three bedrooms because he has a son 12 and a daughter 10.

"I don't know where we're going to move," said Cathy Vingo. "We pay my parents $40 a month now. Rents everywhere are so high. Everything's over $100 a month. And this is a new job for Carmine. He worked in Jersey for 15 years, but he had to quit because carfare was too much. To cross the bridge one way was 55 cents a day."

Carmine Vingo shrugs. "We ain't rich and we ain't poor but it's not so easy either," he said. "I think about what happened and I got to shake my head. Twenty years old. I was 20 years old and my career was finished. That wasn't all. A couple months later I was in a school yard watching a softball game and a guy swings and throws his bat. Guess who it hits in the nose. Carmine."

He smiled and blew on his hands again.
